Case studies

Katie Tyler, Business Analyst

I've worked for the Society since 2010 in a number of customer service and support roles, and progressed to being a team manager. I wanted to put my knowledge of the business to good use and progress into a more specialist role, and the Change department seemed like a great fit.

I started in Change as a Junior Business Analyst and then progressed to Business Analyst. It's a really exciting team to work in – no two days are the same! We lead the way in lots of important projects and get to work with colleagues from across the business. I love feeling like I'm making a positive difference, and the culture here is second to none.

I think the Society's Change department is an interesting place to work. There's always something new to learn and a different challenge to take on.

Dominic Woodall, Portfolio and Programmes Manager

I already had extensive experience of Change before joining the Society in September 2016. It was clear to see that the Change agenda would make a tangible difference to the business and our mission to put members first. I was also drawn to the Society's ambitions for the future and the opportunity to share my experiences.

Every day is different in the Change team and there's always a new challenge to tackle. Most importantly, everything we do has a clear purpose. It gives me a real sense of pride and satisfaction when we deliver an important change, and I'm supported to be able to strike the right balance between work and home life.

As a member of the Change team, you'll be at the heart of really important changes at the Society. You'll always have a sense of purpose in your role and you'll be in a fun, caring and supportive environment. Come and join us!
