Coventry Building Society recognised as one of the UK's best workplaces for women

Coventry Building Society has been officially named one of the UK's Best Workplaces™ for Women by Great Place to Work.

The UK's second largest building society ranked 14th out of the 39 Super Large organisations on the list revealed today.

The Society earned its place following feedback from the annual employee survey. These results are based on what women have anonymously reported about their workplace experience and how well represented they are in the workforce.

To determine the position on the list, Great Place to Work analysed the Society's efforts to support and empower women through its workplace culture. Together with the survey results, the data was evaluated to benchmark the effectiveness of what a company says it offers against the culture their employees actually experience.

Lucy Becque, Chief People Officer at Coventry Building Society, said: "This is fabulous recognition for the Society - not just for the women who work here, but for everyone. It shows that the Society supports women to have a positive experience at work and it also recognises the importance of women throughout our organisation."

"It's really important to us that everyone at the Society feels like they belong and have equal opportunities to be successful."
